Re.: CO2 Green Drive in Hong Kong 2 December 2012

This letter confirms Clean Air Initiative for Asian Cities Center (CAI-Asia) and Clean Air Network (CAN) in Hong Kong's plans to produce the CO2 Green Drive project in connection with the Better Air Quality 2012 (BAQ) Conference held in Hong Kong on 5-7 December 2012.

The conference is co-organized by the Clean Air Initiative for Asian Cities (CAI-Asia), Hong Kong Environmental Protection Department, and Hong Kong Polytechnic University, in partnership with the Asian Development Bank and World Bank.

BAQ 2012 (www.baq2012.org) is the leading event on air quality in Asia, covering transport, energy, industry and climate change, with a particular emphasis on government policies and measures. Policy makers and practitioners meet at BAQ to network, learn and share experiences. Past BAQs have proven to influence policies, initiate new projects and establish partnerships.

The BAQ 2012 theme is "Growing Cities, Healthy Cities" reflecting the challenge of creating livable cities with blue skies and a low carbon footprint in the face of increasing urbanization in Asia, and ensuring that people's health is no longer affected by poor air quality.

The BAQ 2012 organizers look forward to having the CO2 Green Drive in Hong Kong which we believe holds tremendous promise for involving the citizens of Hong Kong in the global challenges we are facing and raise awareness of air friendly transportation solutions, such as, electric mobility and bicycling.

Thank you and please feel free to contact baq2012@cai-asia.org for any questions you may have.

Sincerely yours,

Sophie Punte
